Land use plan takes step forward

It was encouraging to see the redevelopment of the west side of Aquidneck Island take a long-awaited step forward.

The notice announcing the establishment of the Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was posted in the Federal Register, meaning the local group officially can begin its work.

The process of releasing some 2,000 acres of property owned by the Navy in Newport, combination of historic preservation and new use for area is something for which the community has been waiting under the auspices of the Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.

The Aquidneck Island Redevelopment Authority was established and approved by all three communities with anticipation of the Navy’s announcement. The Aquidneck Island Planning Commission, which has been planning for years.